THE MAESTRO ARTS PHILOSOPHY

The worlds of art and entertainment increasingly look for new combinations of musical, visual and digital presentations that will appeal to audiences.

For Maestro Arts, this quest is not new – it has been at the core of our mission since we started. It sets us apart from other management companies, informing how we think, who we work with and what we do.

We are passionate about the traditions of music and the excellence that all our artists embody, and we support them in exploring historic forms in innovative, thrilling ways.

The world isn't flat and we believe art doesn't have to be, either. The more perspectives we take in life, the richer our experience. Different art forms can feed into each other to create fresh, multilayered performances that move and inspire new audiences.

Our Project List represents this artistic mission. Whether these shows combine music with sculpture, animations, theatre or dance, they bring together the finest artists from different disciplines to say something new both about the experience of art, and about life itself.

*'The world isn't flat and we believe art doesn't have to be, either.
The more perspectives we take in life, the richer our experience'*

PROJECT

L'Enfant et les Sortilèges/L'Heure Espagnole

PROPOSAL

James Bonas brings Ravel's two contrasting operas to sparkling life through the magical animations of Grégoire Pont – one a fantasy tale of childhood rebellion; the other a racy Spanish comedy.

PREVIOUS PERFORMANCES

Both works were originally commissioned by Opéra de Lyon. Performances include with San Francisco Symphony, Cincinnati Symphony, Royal Opera House Muscat.

TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS

Conceived to work equally well on opera stage and in concert halls

Michel Cavalca

'Grégoire Pont's remarkable work avoids easy technical effects and always sticks to the truth of text and music. Never has the meaning of 'spells' been so well embodied. The result is a masterwork where the stage setting shows unexpected details, designed with a great sense of poetry on the screen'

L'ENFANT/L'HEURE

'We aim to make the lines between singer and character, music and imagination, disappear, creating a world where anything can happen. A tea cup dances, a single strand of hair is blown across space or an entire room explodes. Yet we don't pretend – we declare it and explore the results, so the story is told through contrasting layers'

PROJECT

Cinesthetics

PROPOSAL

Grégoire Pont brings his witty and whimsical real-time animations to favourite classical music scores, offering audiences spellbinding new connections between eyes, ears and mind.

Minimal set up is required.

CINESTHETICS

'My wish is to use animation as a living matter. Not to project video sequences on a screen as so often happens in concert. With music and motion interplaying, sound is embodied and brought to life, particularly for younger audiences, by the accompaniment of images'

Promoters can choose different versions, which can be staged both in theatres and within exhibitions.

Silence Meal

PROPOSAL

The audience takes an active but noiseless part in Silence Meal, enjoying food and the rituals of eating but offered the space and peace to immerse themselves fully in the communal and sensory experiences, with each event documented in a unique collage of film, photography and sound.

Hosted by the Berlin-based Finnish visual artist Nina Backman, this site-specific performance has taken place in museums, gallery spaces, on stage, outside, and privately, with each performance determined by its surroundings.

PROJECT

Tectonics Festival

PROPOSAL

Since he founded it in 2012, Ilan Volkov's Tectonics Festival has become one of the world's most exciting and diverse events dedicated to the discovery of new music, with editions taking place from Australia to Scotland.

Volkov is one of the figureheads of new music and his passion for introducing local audiences to great new music takes him and Tectonics to new locations around the world, working with professional ensembles and local grassroots ensembles, introducing world premieres as well as rediscovering masterpieces. Performances often combine art forms, including installations and experimental theatre.

PREVIOUS FESTIVALS

Tectonics has been held in Glasgow, Reykjavík, Tel Aviv, Oslo, Stavanger, Adelaide, Athens and New York.

PROJECT

The Art of Being Human

PROPOSAL

The Art of Being Human is an exploration of how it feels to be alive and to exist among others, in relationships that are perfectly expressed through the polyphony of Early Music – its dissonances and harmonies – and reflected in the movement of dancers' bodies, in a performance that offers profound insights into the very meaning of life.

ARTISTS

The visual concept and sculptures are designed by Alexander Polzin and the choreography by Sommer Ulrickson. Music is performed by five players of Phantasm, directed by Laurence Dreyfus, alongside five dancers.

REPERTOIRE

English consort music of the 16th and 17th centuries
